Night Switching Crew at South Janesville, Found Man's Body Horribly Mangled, Near Tracks This Morning.

The mangled body of an unknown man who is supposed to have met his death by falling from the top of a car and being crushed beneath the wheels was picked up by the night switching crew in the South Janesville yards at about 2:30 this morning. Nothing was found on the person of the unfortunate man to help in identifying him.

Switchmen Clough and Lightner noticed the body as they were running on the footboard of engine 585 with Engineer P. Bier, engaged in doing the regular night work. The body was cold when found and it is thought that the man was killed at about 11:30 by number 583. Blood was found on the tracks of one of the cars which seems to show that the victim was thrown from the top of the car as it was being started, and, falling between the cars, was crushed by the last car passing over him. The body was cut in two at the abdomen and otherwise badly mangled. The head and face, however, were but slightly scratched, but none of the men about the yards and office who viewed the remains could identify the man.

The remains were brought to Kimball's morgue by the night force at the yard office and several persons have viewed the body in an endeavor to learn the name of the victim. Nothing was found in his clothing except a looking-glass, a small package of coffee and a notebook, and none of these bore any marks that would give a clue to the name of the owner.

Walter Lawrence was added to the force at the car department today.

CROSSES THE ANDES FINDINGS IN STEEL PROBE MADE PUBLIC

SMITH SAYS TRUST OWNS 75 PER CENT. OF ALL LAKE ORES.

MUCH 'WATER' IS ELIMINATED

Strength of United States Corporation is Shown to Be Due to Its Ownership of Large Portion of Crude Product.

Washington, July 1.—The long expected and much discussed report from the bureau of corporations on the United States Steel corporation, recently submitted to President Taft, was made public here.

Signed by Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, the report makes no recommendations and is almost wholly narrative in form.

Mr. Smith declares that restriction of competition was a prime object of the organizers of the steel corporation, or so-called "trust."

Capitalized at $1,102,000,000, the corporation, he asserts, had tangible property worth only $682,000,000. By constant reinvestment of earnings, however, the report points out, much of the "water" in the company has been eliminated.

Owens 75 Per Cent. of Lake Ores.

The steel corporation now owns 75 per cent. of the Lake ores, having recently concentrated its efforts to securing these properties. On this point the report says:

"Indeed, in so far as the steel corporation's position in the entire iron and steel industries is of monopolistic character, it is chiefly through its control of ore holdings and the transportation of ore."

Discussing in detail how "the impending struggle of the giants" was averted almost over night by the formation of the great combination of combinations, taking in 250 subsidiary companies controlling 60 per cent. of the total crude and finished steel production of the country, the report says:

"Until 1898 the bulk of the business was distributed among a very considerable number of concerns. There was sharp competition, modified by frequent pools of greater or less duration and effectiveness."

Era of Combinations Begins.

Then came an era of great combinations, the report continues, with capitalizations ranging from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000, mergers of many smaller companies, which, instead of eliminating competition, threatened to bring price cutting on a larger scale than ever before.

In 1899-1900 there were three great companies—the Carnegie company, Federal Steel and National Steel—dominating the production of crude and semiprocessed products, and six concerns—the American Steel and Wire, American Tin Plate, American Steel Hoop, American Sheet Steel, National Tube and American Bridge—controlling the lighter finished products.

This was the period, when the "struggle of the giants" was impending and when the formation of the United States Steel corporation was all conceived and brought about. All conspired and brought about. All conspired and brought about.

One of the companies named was the United States Steel company, and, in 1907, the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company was taken over. The promoting syndicate putting the deal through netted $62,500,000 in cash.

Dinners Modify Competition.

The commissioner finds that competition, so far as prices are concerned, has been modified by the policy of "co-operation" inaugurated at the "Garry dinners," about which so much has been said before the congressional steel investigating committee.

The present valuation of the combination's tangible property is placed at $1,187,000,000, as against $1,166,000,000 outstanding securities, an increase of about $187,000,000 in property, while only about $66,000,000 has been added to capitalization.

Not So Bad as He Seemed.

A curious incident occurred at a children's matinee in a Moscow theater lately. The actor who played the villain of the piece was so distressed by the horror with which the little spectators viewed him that, notwithstanding the protests of the manager, he pulled off his wig and false beard, and begged the audience to believe that he was only pretending to be wicked.

Height of Impudence.
They called him "Puny Pepper," because he was, besides one of the smallest, one of the most peppery of fellows in the regiment. To see him throwing his 32-inch chest was to be reminded of the frog in the fable who burst with blowing. When he gave his orders in a high treble he resembled a crow with a cough.

One day, in a particularly tropical temper, he accented the regimental band and began to abuse him. For a while the huge private listened in silence. He was used to such scenes and took them with philosophic calm. But at last he grew weary and called out to a brother private:

"Bill, go and fetch a ladder, will you? I believe he wants to box my ears!"—Answers.

Richly Endowed.

A parson was loudly inveighing against certain schools. He finished by declaring that he was thankful he had never "rubbed his back up against any one."

"Do I understand the brother to say that he thanks God for his ignorance?" asked the bishop.

"Well, yes; if you want to put it that way," he replied.

"Then all I have to add," said the bishop unctuously, "is that the brother has a great deal to be thankful for."—Argonaut.

New Electro-Coating Process.
The electro-coating process by which glassware is decorated with a network of silver designs has recently been extended by Germany to the plating of porcelain dishes, such as plates, bowls, tumblers, and tea and coffee sets. Vessels thus treated are said to wear better than either simple porcelain or solid silver, being less fragile than porcelain and less subject to indentation and deformation than silver. The product is called electro-porcelain, and is cheaper than plated silverware. The plating is usually of silver, but sometimes of nickel. In some cases, instead of covering the entire vessel, the plating is confined to the handles, knobs and edges, and cooking pots are usually left uncovered within, because porcelain can more readily be kept clean than a surface of metal.

How He Did It.

Y'ace, 'o mon stickin' up for them dirty foreigners' them o' fair, an' just as 'e's in the middle av it I shouts out, 'Look at yer beer.' 'Course, round goes 'e head, then I fetches 'im such a buff over the ear-'ole. 'E'avein' I could 'ear the blessed bawful fairly earin' 'em I topped round the corner.—The Sketch.

Care of the Attic.
Pow attic are called, but if they are not light the walls and the beams should be treated to a coat of white paint or whitewash. Once a month the floor should be swept. The windows should be washed three or four times a year. Twice a year there should be a campaign waged against moth, roaches and possible bedbugs, as well as against larger vermin. Keep a rattap and a mousetrap in commission.—Woman's Home Companion.

Talent and Genius.
The discovery of a truth is slow, progressive meditation in silent, untutored of the truth, not preceded by perceptible meditation, is genius.

MAKES FOR ECONOMY

LATEST IMPROVEMENT ON THE FIRELESS STOVE.

Electric Device Insures Both Convenience and Cleanliness—Use of Alarm Clock is Also a Most Useful Innovation.

Those familiar with the economies of the fireless cooker will appreciate the combination of this device with the convenience and cleanliness of the electric stove.

The outside of the stove is made of finished hardwood. The containing compartment is lined with non-rustable metal between which and the woodwork is a fireproof non-heating conducting packing, through which wires pass to the electric stove located in the bottom of the receptacle.

The length of time required to bring a certain meat or vegetable to a boil is known, the dish containing it is placed in the receptacle, and the cover closed. Then the alarm of the clock is set to go off in 20 minutes, a half-hour, or in such time as the case may require. Closing the switch starts the cooking. When the time is up the clock sounds the alarm and at the same time opens the switch, and the cooking then continues as in a fireless cooker. This stove enables "the lady of the house" to start the evening meal, go shopping while it is cooking and return to find it ready to serve piping hot. A drop shelf is provided on the side, while a compartment beneath the cooker permits the storage of cooking utensils.—Popular Mechanics.

Too Joyous.
A grocer in Charlotte, Mich., put a can of beans in his window and offered a pair of roller skates to the one who could guess the exact number. A lad named Willis Hines hit it exactly and got the skates, but he felt so elated over him good luck that he fell dead on his way home. The doctor said it was a case of being too joyous. If the boy had got a kicking instead of the skates he would have lived on.

Cod Fisheries Remunerative.
The catch of cod in the United States in third in value of fish caught, amounting to almost $3,000,000, followed by that of chad, lobster and clams.

Value of the Phrase-Maker.
A talent for phrase-making can still more life into a lost cause than logical argument.—London Truth.

Only Playthings.
Glory, ambition, armies, fleets, thrones, crowns; playthings of grown children.—Victor Hugo.

Imaginative.
"He is a man of great imagination, isn't he?" "I should say so. He has been keeping the books of a mining corporation."—Life.

Educational Signs.
The municipal council of Paris aims to teach history by means of street names. Two of the signs already in place read "Ilu Rivoli—French victory, 1797." "Avenue Victor Hugo—French poet and novelist, 1802-1885."

Life Worth Studying.
Every employer of labor might do worse than to spend a part of his day of rest in studying the life of Robert Owen, born May 14, 1771. He kept his workmen busy in dull times and made money by it.

From the Storehouse of the Eyes.
Jays are hold as lions, roving, running, leaping here and there, far and near. They speak all languages; they wait for no introduction; they are no Englishmen; ask no leave of age or rank; they respect neither poverty nor riches, neither learning nor power, nor virtue, nor sex, but intrude, and come again, and go through and through you in a moment of time. What inundation of life and thought is discharged from one soul into another through them!—Emerson: "Conduct of Life."

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

When the sun came up this morning with a nod and a smile to me, And a robin in the hedgeaway broke out in melody, I don't know why I did it, but I just threw back my head

And to both the sun and robin I answered, and I said:
"Gee, I'm glad I'm living!"

When I started for the city and its day of toil and grind, Though the toll stood out before me, I didn't seem to mind, For a field mouse running by me paused a moment on his way To greet a dandelion, and in blithe manner say:

"Gee, I'm glad I'm living!"

I haven't got a dollar and I owe a hundred cents, But I've willing hands to labor and there's a recompense; My home is where my hat hangs—sometimes it doesn't hang, But, hark! the robin voiced this morning when he sang:

"Gee, I'm glad I'm living!"

For every bud that blossoms, I'm glad a thousand times; For every bird that warbles, and every bell that chimes; For all my gifts and blessings, be they many, poor or few, For every heart that loves me, and every friend that's true;

"Gee, I'm glad I'm living!"

—Boston Globe.

The child brought up in the home where flowers and music contribute to the joy of every day existence, develops a love for the beautiful in Nature and art, while the child less favorably surrounded is frequently deprived of these finer sensibilities. The breeding of the twig of a new generation is more important than it seems, for it is the wood which determines the character of the men and women of tomorrow.

The statement is often made that there is no sentiment in business, and men who are constantly being crowded out of familiar ways to make way for the march of progress realize how true it is, yet there is a great deal of sentiment in life, and it merits encouragement, and the most careful cultivation.

The man who expressed joy over the fact that he was living was not a sentimentalist. He may, or he may not have had an abundance of the world's goods, but he possessed a heart that was filled with gladness, and a mind that grasped the bright things of life.

The voices of Nature and animal life appealed to him, and the harmony which prevailed in both realms was like a tonic which caused his heart to respond in gratitude over the simple fact that he was living. He simply had eyes to see and used them to advantage. The things he saw were not peculiar. They were the common-place things of life, inviting inspection of every traveler on the busy thoroughfare.

The world in which we live is but a workshop and a play house, though many people treat it as though the play ground of life belonged to childhood and regard their neighbors who take time to live by the way as abnormal and immature.

There is something said somewhere in the Bible about there being a time for everything; but many good people who adopt the Book as a text book, regard life as so serious that all time is considered wasted which is not devoted to work.

The fact is ignored that men and women are but children of larger growth and while age may bring responsibility, it was never intended to dry up the fountain of youth or retard the flow of the life-giving stream.

The history of the past decade is filled with sketches of men who passed on prematurely because they refused to recognize the value of living by the way, and every country in the land is well represented by suicides of this class.

People who neglect the physical life as they travel through its pleasant thoroughfares and plan to devote the last day of their journey to rest and recreation, are always doomed to disappointment.

The man in middle life who forgets that he was once a boy, never recovers from the loss, and when advancing age finds him with plenty of time on his hands, the inclination to play has left him, for he has forgotten how and so he drifts out into old age, a helpless dulleard.

A man of seventy-three, a wealthy manufacturer, spends his winters in the game section of Florida. He said to a friend last winter: "I'm going to follow my dog for quail, just as long as I'm able to travel, and then I'm going to fish just as long as I can sit in a boat."

That's the spirit that keeps men young. The old gentleman tramped the woods three days in the week and hugged one hundred and ninety quail, and kept a hand on the line of his business, at long range, for his mind kept pace with his body and his heart was like the heart of a boy.

Some people go through life with downcast eyes and somber faces regarding it as a journey through a "vale of tears." To their notion, living is so serious a proposition that nothing should be done to mar its solemnity.

Talk to them about rest and relaxation and they remind you that there will be plenty of time to rest and play "beyond the grave."

Their idea of heaven is a walled city, with pokey gates and streets of gold, where every citizen is a musician, provided with a harp. A land of perpetual sunshine, where rest and music are the only occupations through a long eternity.

This conception of the future life may be right; but it is less satisfying to the busy mortal, with no desire for rest and no music in his soul, than the notion of the Indian who anticipates the happy hunting ground, and goes down into the valley equipped for the chase.

What the occupation of the life beyond will be beyond the ken of human solution and it is of but little importance compared to what we make out the life that is.

The mission of life is here and now. The helping hand, the cheerful smile, the cheery voice belong to the equipment of humanity and when well employed, they respond in melody until the heaven in anticipation becomes a heaven in fact.

What we need to cultivate as members of the great human family, is a larger sense of appreciation, and a disposition to look on the bright side of life.

For every bud that blossoms I'm glad a thousand times; For every bird that warbles, and every bell that chimes; For all my gifts and blessings, be they many, poor or few, For every heart that loves me and every friend that's true!

By WALT MASON.

Now, while the joyous evening flows we'll drink again to women's eyes, those mirrors of delight; so bring the red and genial wine that HIGH WASSAIL shine like stars on summer night. Oh, women's eyes! Those timid wells in which a gentle splendor dwells, sweet orbs of divers hues! To honor them a million men have drunk and drunk and drunk again; and swallowed tube of booze. And women's eyes through all the years have faded been by bitter tears in lonely nights and dawns, because men at the banquet who to celebrate their stately eyes with flasks and demijohns. My Aunt Jennifer's eyes are green—the gentlest eyes I've ever seen, like some rare flowers in bloom; but if I made them an excuse to fill myself with serpent juice, I'd swart me with the broom. If men must meet at festive board where cups are drawn and songs are sung, they should not drink to eyes, but to cheery grins and kindly bones and rosy farms and paupers' groans and widows' waiting cries.

With three-quarters of the course covered Harvard continued to lead by fully nine lengths, and nearing the finish Harvard held her own, rowing easily.

Yale pulled out a victory in the freshmen eight by a superb start in the last half mile, while the Harvard substitute varsity four, leading from the start, defeated Yale by two lengths. Both races were rowed well, but a contrary wind and a slack tide made the time slow.

Official time of the freshmen race: Yale, 11:52; Harvard, 12:50.
Official time of varsity four: Harvard, 13:37; Yale, 13:52.

Primitive Burmese Customs.
In Burmah girls are privileged to do the wooing and men must always wait for them to take the initiative. Courtship and marriage are very simple in Burmah. When a girl sees a man she thinks will make her a good husband she offers him a stick of sweetmeat. If he accepts her he eats the sweet and they are then and there considered man and wife.

But—
He is blessed. And when he in his turn needs mercy the world will be very tender and solicitous.

On the other hand, the merciless is sure to be punished for his lack of mercy. And when he is lashed for his sin the world will look on and laugh at his discomfiture and feel that retribution has found its certain victim.

Take the business world.
The business man who is hard and unrelenting, who demands his pound of flesh, who kicks his rival when he is down, some day—no changeable are economic conditions—some day he will be in need of the mercy he has refused another.

And then—
Revenge steps in—the revenge of the refused.

Men are quick to pay in resentment; but, you say, are they always grateful for mercy shown them? Nearly always. About the best thing a real man forgets is the hour of his need and mercy. But grateful or no—
"The quality of mercy is not strained."

It blesses him who gives as it enriches him who withholds. The quality of mercy enriches a man. It makes him big in soul, strong in honesty and tall enough to stoop in service. It is only the chivalric in spirit who are merciful.

Therefore be merciful. It pays, and it is the sign of greatness—the greatness of goodness.

When you are tempted to strike, stay your hand. And scorn not your rival when he is in the dust. Be merciful.

Like some evil day you shall be delivered over to the retribution that awaits his chance.
Be merciful and obtain mercy.

The old notion that women are more emotional than men has been disproved by a celebrated authority of Europe.

HARVARD RUNS AWAY FROM YALE OARSMEN

Crimson Crew Wins Two of Trio of Races in Annual Regatta at New London.

New London, Conn., July 1.—Fifty thousand spectators massed along the river banks, on boats and on trolleys, assembled to witness the forty-fifth annual regatta between Harvard and Yale, saw the blue of old Yale swept to defeat for the fourth time in as many years. The crimson crew won the varsity eight-oared race and the varsity four-oared event.

The Cambridge men caught the water easily and took the lead from the start, and at the finish were pulling easily. An aeroplane circled over the course during the progress of the race.

The official time of the varsity race was: Harvard, 22:41; Yale, 23:40. Harvard had the advantage in the first 50 yards of half a length.

Reaching the mile mark, Harvard was leading by about two lengths. Passing the two-mile stake of the navy yard Harvard was leading by six lengths. Atwood, who outstripped the boats, circled around behind them and again followed.

Yale pulled out a victory in the freshmen eight by a superb start in the last half mile, while the Harvard substitute varsity four, leading from the start, defeated Yale by two lengths. Both races were rowed well, but a contrary wind and a slack tide made the time slow.

DR. JOHN JACKOLA DISAPPEARS.

Has Met With Foul Play.

Columet, Mich., July 1.—Close friends of Dr. John Jackola express the belief that he has met with foul play at Detroit, where he disappeared mysteriously June 21. Detectives of New York, Chicago, Milwaukee and other large cities are being engaged to look out for the missing man.

Jackola is credited with writing several articles that have had almost world-wide circulation in the past two or three years, many of them showing queer characteristics of the man. His recent affair, in which he claimed to be engaged to Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, is probably the most serious of his queer actions. He showered bouquets, collections and love missives on the noted suffragette until she had the police stop him.

Scandinavian Courtship.
It was considered beneath the dignity of a Scandinavian warrior to court his bride by gallantry and sublimity he always waited until she had bestowed her affections on another and was in her way to the marriage ceremony, then collecting his faithful followers they fell upon the wedding party and carried away the bride. It was much in favor of this practice that marriages were always celebrated at night.

Placing the Blame.
A girl nine years old at Bremen, Germany, swallowed 40 pins and thus killed herself. For two weeks no one could think of any reason why she should have done it, and then some one said that it was because she had attended a moving picture show, and the proprietor of the place was arrested and fined $25. If the girl's father had swallowed a nation and died they would probably have sent the mayor of the city to jail.

Placing the Blame.
A girl nine years old at Bremen, Germany, swallowed 40 pins and thus killed herself. For two weeks no one could think of any reason why she should have done it, and then some one said that it was because she had attended a moving picture show, and the proprietor of the place was arrested and fined $25. If the girl's father had swallowed a nation and died they would probably have sent the mayor of the city to jail.

COMING CONVENTION OF UNITED SPANISH WAR VETERANS PROMISES TO BE EXCEP- TIONALLY INTEREST- ING.

BATTERY HERE SUNDAY

Battery F, From Ft. Sheridan, Reach Their Camp Grounds At Noon, Tomorrow.—Will Stay Until Thursday, July 6th, at The Fair Grounds.

Janesville is ready to greet the coming delegation of state and national troops that will begin arriving in the city Sunday noon when the detachment from Ft. Sheridan, under command of Col. Adams, reaches its camp at the Fair Grounds.

Today, decorators are busy putting the finishing touches to building throughout the city, twining the yellow and red of the Spanish War Vet-way for visitors to reach their camp will be to take the Milton avenue car line and get off at St. Mary's avenue.

They will be camped near the entrance to the Fair Grounds from this street.
Autoists can use the carriage entrance but the fact that the grounds are limited for the maneuvers of troops has led the committee to decide no autos or teams will be allowed in the grounds on July 4th, during the sham battle.

The sale of seats for the sham battle is progressing nicely. Before 9:30 over a hundred admission seats had been sold and almost twice as many grand stand. The downtown hotel office is at headquarters in the Peter L. Myers building on the corner of Milwaukee and South bluff streets.
It will be open until nine-thirty tonight and all day Sunday and Monday evening up to noon Tuesday, when the seats can be obtained at the Fair Grounds.

Chairman Eugene Fish of the Civic Parade says that the entries in his parade are increasing almost hourly and he expects that the displays the three days' celebration will see crans with the red, white and blue of Old Glory. Never has the city presented such a gala appearance as it does today and by Monday morning with the stands along the streets in operation the opening of the three days' celebration will see Janesville gayer than ever before.

The carnival company will pitch their tents on North Main street, not on the Corn Exchange and North River street as has been reported. They will arrive tomorrow evening by special train from Kenosha where they have been known for the past week.
All day today the concessionists have been busy seeking locations and Chairman Bart Ruddle has had his hands full locating them so they will not conflict with similar exhibits already assigned.

The bandstands are in place at the Court House Park, on North Main street, the Corn Exchange, River street and the head of Milwaukee shown on the streets will far surpass any previous efforts. Chairman Arthur Jones has promises of cars from all parts of the county, the offer of the $50 prize having attracted many car owners to compete. This parade is Wednesday evening and will be the closing evening of the celebration.

The first state troops to arrive will be the Ft. Atkinson Company which start on their overland march from the Fort Sunday morning. They will camp on the road Sunday night and reach Janesville about noon Monday.
Their camp will be in Spring Brook where grounds have been arranged.
Company I, from Beloit, and Company H, from Monroe, will also arrive some time Monday.

The first troop train will reach the city from Milwaukee Monday afternoon at five-thirty. It will be composed of a baggage car, three horse cars, three flat cars, and two coaches, bringing Battery A of the Wisconsin National Guard from their army at Whitfish Bay. There will be 102 and more will be added tonight or Sunday. The streamers across the street are flapping welcome to the visitors and it is safe to say that by tomorrow night rooms at the hotels will be at a premium.

Word received from Battery F this morning states that they camp at Albion's Grove tonight and will reach Janesville by noon Sunday. The best men, sixty horses, four guns and cat-saps and their complete camp outfit.

They will unload at the Northwestern Depot and go into camp at the corner of Washington and Magnolia avenue.
The second troop train to arrive will bring the four Milwaukee infantry companies and will reach Janesville about nine in the evening.

SEEPAGE HANDERS THE SEWER WORK

Construction of Storm Sewer on North River Street Made Extremely Difficult On Account of Water.

Workmen on the storm sewer, which is being constructed on North River street are encountering considerable difficulty in their work at the present time on account of the seepage into the trench from the river.
In order to accommodate all future or possible contingencies, the sewer, which is being built of cement has several feet below the level of the water in the river. The water naturally leaks into the trench and makes the work not only uncomfortable and unpleasant for the workmen, but at the same time difficult.
At the present time, the earth around the trench has threatened to cave in and progress is extremely slow. The power is being built from the river to the machine at the corner of Wall and North River streets. The work has been completed thus far from the river to a point in front of the old building of the Janesville Bank and Door Company.

generators. The lecturing is done by Dr. Harvey Brown and he will be necessitated by an operator and all of the necessary equipment.

This is one of a series of these outdoor lectures on the subject of tuberculosis which have been given in Milwaukee and other cities, and which will be held in twenty-five of the large of the cities in the state during the season.

JANESVILLE SPICE CO.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 1.—These prospects for the guidance of wives and husbands in cases of difference over household economies were laid down by Judge Charles L. Smith in the separation case brought by Mrs. Edith Marsh against Henry D. Marsh, assistant treasurer of the Five-Cent Savings bank.

The husband is absolute lord and master of the exchequer.

He is entitled to his meals at any hour he wants them.

He may select such food as he chooses. If he wants one food and his wife another the husband's decision goes.

A servant girl to whom the husband objects must be discharged.

Finally, man, who pays the bills, and not woman, is boss.

Judge Long advised the Marshes to patch up their differences. Mr. Marsh left the courtroom wreathed in smiles. Mrs. Marsh did not endorse the court's opinions, and said so.

PLANS FOR NEW U. S. BUILDINGS

Three Structures for Departments' Use Will Cost $2,000,000.

Washington, July 1.—The officially approved plans for the new government buildings advocated by the present administration were made public today. They provide for the erection of buildings for the department of state, commerce and labor and justice, on a site that lies between 14th and 15th streets and extends from Pennsylvania avenue south to the Mall which runs from the capitol to the Washington monument. Architecturally the new buildings will supplement the building design now provided in Washington. The cost will be $2,000,000.

A Pan to Store Cherries.

A good way to store cherries is to use a common steel writing pan, turning the point into a new panholder, thus making a little scoop so that it fits the stone and removes it without bruising the fruit at all.—Woman's Home Companion.

BEAMEN'S STRIKE GROWS WORSE

Vessels Tied Up at All British Ports—Riots at Liverpool.

London, July 1.—Another day of the shipping strike has left conditions materially worse. In almost every port in the United Kingdom many vessels are tied up and work is at a standstill.

Several individual owners have conceded their employees' demands and are operating, but the number of men who have refused to return to work has largely increased.

The Liverpool owners met and confirmed the concessions the Cunard, Canadian Pacific and Allan lines offered, which the men accepted but afterwards rejected, and decided that no further concessions should be made.

There was a bold attempt at Liverpool to fire the steamer Arcturion. In all five fires were discovered and extinguished on board the vessel.

At Liverpool the strikers made riotous demonstrations and police reinforcements had to be called.

Little Bed-Time Tales By EDITH HAVENS

The Storm Windows

It was getting cold away down deep in the great pond. Here and there a fish darted about in an effort to keep warm. Over near the middle and close to the bottom, a group of pickered were swimming about slowly and talking among themselves.

"Say, it is getting cold," said one flapping his tail with a shiver. "It is pretty near time that Mother Nature put on the storm windows!"

"I should say so," said one of the others. "Why is it she waits until the very last minute?"

"Well none of us have ever frozen yet, so I guess she knows best," answered the first pickered, slowly.

"Perhaps she will put them on to-night," he added.

Suddenly down through the water there flashed a dark round object and thinking it was some morsel of food, all of the fish darted straight for it.

It proved to be nothing but a stone. "Thrown by some little boy up on the shore," remarked the biggest pickered a bit angrily. Then they swam about looking for something to eat.

Up in the world the wind was whistling a merry song and as he passed over the pond the white caps rushed to the surface and danced to his music. Down deep where the fishes were it was very still and cold. The cold made the fishes drowsy and one by one they dropped off to sleep, their tails barely moving as they floated silently about.

The cold grew more intense and slowly but surely a marvellous change occurred upon the surface of the pond. Finding it too cold, in spite of their dancing the whitecaps had disappeared and now a gelatine-like covering was spreading across the top of the water. As the night wore on, it grew harder and finally all of a sudden there came a snap.

What do you think had happened? Dame Nature had done her work. She had put the storm windows on the pond.

What a wonderful great window pane it was. And, do you know when it is once on, the fishes never suffer from the cold?

THE HEAVENS IN JULY.

By Prof. Eric Doolittle of the University of Pennsylvania.

Two remarkable variable stars. Interesting star showers. Venus reaches its greatest distance from the sun July 7th.

The slow turning of the celestial sphere has again brought the summer branch of the Milky Way into our evening sky, and we see this beautiful golden arch stretching across the heavens, well up from the ground in the East. All along this wonderful cloud, and apparently immersed in it, there shine out a bright train of most interesting stars.

Figure 1.—The Constellations, 9 P. M. July 1. If facing East hold the map upright; if facing West hold East below; if facing North hold the map inverted.

Some groups of stars. Beginning at the North, the reader may easily trace out the bright W-shaped group Cassiopeia, and next Cepheus, and then the most perfect and striking Northern of all will this month attain their greatest brightness. The first of these is the wonderful variable called Mira, that strange and distant star which is ever growing rapidly fainter or brighter. When faintest it is but too faint to be seen with the naked eye; sometimes it is almost as faint as the faintest stars, so that even in a good field of small telescope it would seem to have totally disappeared. But it does not remain so faint long. Suddenly it grows brighter and brighter, until at last it is pouring out 100 times as much light as at first.

It usually requires about four and one-half months for Mira to increase from its greatest faintness to its greatest brightness, and about six and one-half months for it to fade away again, so that at an interval of about 11 months it shines out with its greatest brilliancy. But this interval varies slightly, and it is even more remarkable that when we see its light increasing we cannot precisely say when it will grow. The curves of Figure 2 show the course of careful measures of this star during the last five years. It will be seen that its brightness in December, 1905, was the most striking of recent years; it then was one of the brightest stars of the sky, being much brighter than Castor and almost as bright as Regulus. Its appearance during the next years was less remarkable; for example, in 1904, it was brighter, a variable much more brilliant than the North Star.

Unfortunately Mira is now in the morning sky and is not well above the ground until about three hours before sunrise. From Figure 2, which shows a portion of the northeastern heavens at 3 A. M. on July 1, the reader can see, over, easily, two things. First, with the naked eye alone he can watch its steady and wonderful increase in brightness. The other star which will reach its greatest brightness this month may be found at A, Figures 1 and 2, just below the star at M, and nearly in a straight line between the stars B and C. This star is even fainter than Mira, but it is usually far too faint to be seen with the eye, and when faintest only visible in the very best of telescopes. During the first part of July it will probably become as bright as the stars at B and C. Figure 1 it will resemble the bright star at B, and then very rapidly fade away. What there is here, pointing out these great stars to make them more easily seen, is a variable of nearly regular intervals is widely unknown. It is remarkable that nearly half of all the variable stars of the heavens behave nearly as these two stars do, and the interval with nearly all of them is not far from one year.

There are two interesting star showers which occur during July, besides many faint ones. On any one of the dark, moonless evenings near the middle of the month the careful observer will see an occasional faint, bluish meteorite dart outward from a point in the northern sky. This point is shown in Figure 1, and it is usually far too faint to be seen with the eye, and when faintest only visible in the very best of telescopes. Coating the Pill.

There is an oblique way of reproof which takes off from the sharpness of it.—Steele.

During the 10th annual dinner of the Traffic Club of Pittsburgh, President George F. Baer told this story: "Now, I do not altogether agree with your toastmaster that the public has any great respect for the ability of railroad magnates. I think they do possibly overrate their capacity. I had a very peculiar experience last summer. I was sitting on my porch in Reading after dinner, smoking a cigar, when up the walk came a very tall man with a carpet bag in his hand. He stopped at the bottom of the steps and said: 'Do you the president of the Reading railway?' I drew up my shoulders and said: 'I was. Then he walked up the steps and said: 'What is the price of a ticket from here to Niagara Falls and back?' I said: 'My dear friend, I do not know. You will have to go down to the ticket office. Do you know where it is?' He said: 'Yes,' picked up his carpet bag, looked at me, and said: 'You are the president of the Reading railway and don't know the price of a ticket to Niagara Falls and back?' Well, I said I didn't. Then he walked down and stepped and turned and said: 'You are a hell of a railroad president.'"

GOOD OPPORTUNITIES IN JOB AS TESTER; MANY START THERE

Many of the Daring and Fitted Racers or the Present Day Start As Testers in Automobile Works.

Hundreds of young men are being attracted into the automobile factories where their full, freckled, rosy cheeks are shining with the glow of good work done and the good wages earned. The factory superintendent finds their office hours taken up with applications from young men who wish to work on automobiles. The tester's job is the link between the manufacturer and the customer. The owner and that link must be the weakest if the car is to gain the reputation for the reasonable quality of endurance. The tester has the job of studying the car and its parts, the design and construction, the fit of the car on the road, and the way the car will work under the most severe conditions. "Work as a tester in an automobile factory," says George D. Wray, prominent in automobile circles, "offers splendid opportunities to the young mechanic. It is healthful and fascinating work. It is a quick ladder of reputation. Most of the famous racing drivers you hear so much about got their training as test drivers of some of the now famous manufacturers. There's Lancia, foreign daredevil, for instance. He is now a manufacturer. Formerly the tester's work started in the fall and continued through the winter and spring when driving was slow. Now the tester is put on the new cars through their paces all year around. You see the test man, perched on a box clamped on the skeleton of a car, howling along the smooth roads in the summer time or down the paved streets and say, 'There's a fellow having a nice time. You don't think so when you see him slowing around curves or plugging through heavy mud or stuck in the heavy downpour or the blizzard. But unlike the auto owner, his work takes him out in all kinds of weather. The automobile owner can always wait for sunshine.

"I have seen the boys come in on a winter day after a ride on the frozen lake with clothes almost frozen solid. There are no glass tops or windshields on the testers' auto.

"The tester takes the car from the assembly department, after the working parts have been packed with grease and shot full of oil, for its maiden run. The road work it is put through is severe. It has to be for the tester must make a report on the speed-going and hill-climbing abilities of the machine. He has to make all his adjustments in every part of the car and is required to make a detailed report of what his eyes and ears have told him about the car. If changes are required to make the auto a good auto, it's the tester who tells the factory superintendent.

"After the first piece has been gone through, the auto passes to the head tester and then it has its body fitted on and is sent to the paint shop. That's where the tester rides on 'volley' his work here is all important. The car must work harmoniously, and the tester must keep his ears and brain working to determine the running qualities and the regularity of the engine. Then the car is put back in the factory, cleaned, the final adjustment of brakes and timing gears are made, the brass is polished up and the car is tagged for shipment.

"RED TIED" SALESMAN IS A THING OF PAST

Science Has Replaced Swaggerer and Speed Maniac in Line of Auto Salesmanship.

"Automobiles are no longer sold over the bar between drinks," says Max A. Welschinger, "The automobile salesman has dropped the sports about and he has put away the red tie with the enormous sparker. The change has benefited him greatly.

"You may think that to buy an automobile was sold over the bar is a crude way of putting the fact, but the crudity is not only a matter of degree. The first automobile salesman made his sales just that way for a bar is a bar whether it has a swindler floor, marble pillars or walls hung in tapestry and reflected in French mirrors. He smelled of kazoos and talked like an exhausted valet.

"He was the swaggerer, the easy spending, speed-mad fellow, who gave the joy ride. He furnished the newspapers with stories of 'houdou' soundings, smashups at grade crossings and the whining of slow moving rednecks and the carter's annual kingdom, until the long arm of the law reached out and nabbed him by the neck. He was shaken up until his teeth chattered. Then when the efficient manufacturers were driven from the field, the red tie salesman had to go, too. The chums of the early days are just a memory now; as much a memory as the first automobile that pulled you to the curb to watch it disappear in a rattle of machinery and a snarl of smoke.

"The cleanest cut, the cleverest, the most energetic young business man of the day are in the automobile industry selling cars at the local sales rooms or on the road. Today selling an automobile is an earnest endeavor to show, by comparison, that the car you are handling is the one that represents the best value for the money it is sold for. The automobile business is reaching a really competitive stage and the wide-awake, conscientious, individualistic business man is fitting his peculiar talents to the selling of automobiles made by the reputable concerns.

"Just put this fact away as a truism. If a salesmanship has been developed within the last six or eight years, we are told in numerous trade magazines, the credit must be given to the automobile industry which has faced the condition during its own transformation from a game to a definitely established industry."

Mexican Bandits Torture Man Who Refuses to Reveal Hidden Money.
Shawnee, Okla., July 1.—Robert Shawnee, a Canadian, was burned at the stake by Mexican bandits near Fort Sumner, N. M., June 15, according to a letter received here from Mrs. Emma Hingham, formerly of this city, mother-in-law of Shawnee. He was killed because he refused to reveal the hiding place of a large amount of money that had been left in his care by a Mexican railroad which employed him. Mrs. Hingham has notified the British government.

With Any Number of Speeds--

The ease with which a Cartercar can be driven—even in the most crowded sections, or on the steepest hillsides—greatly astonishes old automobilists who sit for the first time at the steering wheel of a

In driving a Cartercar it is hardly necessary to remove the hands from the steering wheel in controlling the car. Its flexibility is not found in any other automobile.

Private owners, ladies and quite young boys experience no difficulty in driving the Cartercar because of the simplicity of operation and quick response to the driver's wishes.

The disc transmission as employed in the Cartercar is the most simple form of automobile construction in common use.

The chain-drive protects the chain from all dust, dirt, grit, and flying pebbles. It delivers a greater percentage of power than any other form of transmission and drive.

BANKS RESERVE $1,478,140.705.

National Institutions Show Great Gains Over Year Ago.

Washington, July 1.—The total reserve held by 7,277 national banks at the close of business on June 7, the date of the last call by the controller of the currency, was $1,478,140,705, an average of 22.10 per cent, and $121,870,815 above the amount required to be held by law. The percentage in the central reserve cities has increased to 27.37 per cent.

Compared with their condition on June 30, 1910, all the national banks show increases of $186,123,977 in their total resources, $180,679,000 in loans and discounts and $190,771,811 in individual deposits. The only decreases in any items are in United States government deposits and rediscounts, but these are slight.

Meanness of Conservatism.

There is always a certain meanness in the argument of conservatism. In its fact, it affirms superiority in its fact. It affirms the fact, and it holds its fingers clutch the fact, and it will not open its eyes to see a better fact. The eagle whose conservatism is set to defend is the actual state of things, good and bad. The project of innovation is the best possible state of things.—Emerson.

GIRL IS DROWNED IN PLUNGE.

Miss Pauline Alexander Dies When Launch Engine Explodes.

Oconomowoc, Wis., July 1.—Leaping from a blazing gasoline launch, the engine of which exploded, into the waters of Oconomowoc lake to escape the flames, Miss Pauline Alexander, daughter of Lewis M. Alexander, of Milwaukee, former president of the General Paper company, was drowned.

With her were her brother John, who swam ashore badly burned, and her mother and Miss Fanny Jones, daughter of a Milwaukee insurance company president, who were rescued uninjured.

Miss Alexander, though a good swimmer, became tangled in her clothing and could not keep afloat. The other women were rescued by Malcolm Rogers of Chicago.

BLACK HAWK SHAFT UNVEILED.

Hundreds Attend Dedication of Statue to Famous Indian Chief.

Oregon, Ill., July 1.—Several hundred men and women from Chicago and other parts of Illinois today took part in the ceremony of unveiling Leander Taft's statue of Black Hawk, which has been erected on Eagle's Nest bluff, near this city. Edgar A. Baneroff delivered the oration and Charles E. Eastman and Miss Laura M. Cornelia responded on behalf of their race. Dr. Eastman is the dean of Indian literary men and Miss Cornelia is almost a full-blooded Indian and is highly educated. Poems were read by Miss Ella Peattie and Hamlin Garland.

Black Hawk is represented in his blanket, reluctantly leaving the valley which always had served his tribe as the council grounds.

BIDDLE CHILDREN WERE IN PERIL

Girl and Boy Swept Out to Sea While Swimming; Life Guards to Rescue.

Athens, N. J., July 1.—Miss Coriella Biddle, aged seventeen; Laydstone Biddle, aged fifteen, children of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Biddle of Middle, and James Talow, Jr., aged eighteen, were swept out to sea while swimming off Dorset avenue at Ventnor City, and escaped drowning through the thrilling rescue effected by life guards. Young Biddle was swept away from his sister by a strong undercurrent, and the latter, seeing his danger, bravely swam after him. Both were caught in a cross current that took them rapidly out. Laidlaw saw them and swam to their assistance. Life guards struck out for the imperiled trio and rescued them.

Reason's whole pleasure lies in these words: health, peace and competence.—Pope.

BIG CITIES GET POSTAL BANKS.

Savings Depositories Are Opened and Do a Thriving Business.

Washington, July 1.—Postal savings bank depositories were opened today in the biggest cities in the country, including New York and such cities as Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, New Orleans, Kansas City and San Francisco. All arrangements had been perfected and Uncle Sam's banks were doing a rushing business by noon.

Seldom Are Just.

The rapid and the slow are seldom just; the unjust wait either not at all, or wait too long.—Lavater.

Monarch Never Writes Letters.

It is a well-known fact that the ruler of Great Britain never writes a letter. Those who need to correspond with his majesty who are aware of the right procedure usually write to the king's secretary or a member of the household, asking the matter in question should be placed before the king, but petitions for the exercise of the prerogative in any form on matters of state are required to be submitted through the house of lords.

One Writer's View of Life.

The art of life consists in putting ourselves into the place of those who do not understand us, as well as of those who do not understand us.—Ivan Pnin.

Where the Fire Was.

During the sermon in a church, a man in the front row of the congregation was preaching, while many of his hearers slept. Suddenly he started them by a loud cry of "Fire! Fire!" There was a momentary pause among the congregation, and a man cried out, "Where, sir? Where?" "In hell," the preacher replied, "for those who sleep under the preaching of the Word."

BUICK CARS

PRELIPP BROS.

The REO Is "All There"

Whatever test you apply to the Reo you'll find it "all there." It has all the qualities you want in a motor car.

HILL CLIMBING—You want a car that will take grades without much let-up of speed, and the best test of that is mountain climbing.

The Reo (the same car, by the way, that went from New York to San Francisco in 10 1/2 days) climbed to the top of Mt. Hamilton in California—a distance of 24 1/2 miles in 65 minutes, beating the former world's record by 10 minutes.

RACING—You may not want to go over sandy roads at 52 miles an hour; but you do want a car with the power and ability that this speed implies.

On October 15, 1910, the Reo raced over a very sandy 60-mile road with a minutes 43 seconds.

ENDURANCE AND RELIABILITY—You don't want to turn your pleasure jaunts into tests of endurance; but you want proof that your car will stand more strain than you will ever put it to.

In the New York to Atlanta run of 1910, the Reo finished in perfect condition and challenged every other car, regardless of price, to a technical examination. There were no "takers."

In August, 1910, the Reo went from New York to San Francisco in 10 days, 15 hours and 31 minutes, without a wrench being touched to its engine.

COMFORT—Apply that test yourself. Let us take you out for a spin in a Reo over any kind of road you may choose around here.

move, gritting his teeth with rage, lighting match after match between breakers to see if the batteries were dry.

Of course, they weren't dry; there was nothing dry about the car except the roof. When it was all over and the sea was merely playing sportively around the trees, Aubrey got out to inspect the damage. It must have been plenty, for after a lot of pushing around the spark and the throttle, of pumping up the pressure and lighting matches to look at the indicator, of taking off the hood and smashing it on savagely, we still stayed firmly where we were. Aubrey tried to crank up but the engine merely turned over on its other side with a grunt and went to sleep again. It was, as you will imagine, a unique situation.

After a while one of the acetylene lamps went out and the car looked like a dog asleep with one eye open. Finally when neither coaxing nor veiled profanity availed anything, we got out, mother and I,
and ankle deep in wet sand we walked and walked —and then we walked. It was two o'clock when we reached the Country Club and were put to bed, wrapped up in blankets and smothered in hot water bottles. The Van Dune girls, who went down to bathe at eight o'clock the next morning, met Aubrey Watson, still in the clothes he had worn on the car, and he looked as if he had been tramping the beach
all night.

But, after all, that was only the beginning. The real disaster occurred the following week. The Dudleys gave a lawn party, ending with a cotillon in a tent; it was every complete, everyone said, from Japanese lanterns and lots of punch to sandflies and mosquitoes. Then some idiots suggested going out to the Catamaran, a big floating raft that was anchored on the second sandbar, out in the harbor.
I'd been fighting shy of Aubrey Watson all evening, so I went too. When we got to the raft it was very dark. Percy Haswell helped me up the little iron ladder and turned for someone else. Afterwards he tamaran and stared at the rows of Japanese lanterns strung from the Dudley veranda to the Dudley trees, and from the Dudley trees out along the Dudleydock.

When some one on the other side of the raft coughed apologetically, I nearly fell off, which would have been inconvenient—I have not reached that stage in swimming when I can take six strokes without my feet shooting out of the water and my head going down.

"You needn't be alarmed about Haswell," the voice went on savagely. "He could not fracture that thick skull of his."

"It's you, is it?" I said. "I might have known it."

"Oh, indeed!" This was distinctly an

BABY PITIFUL SIGHT WITH ECZEMA

Completely Covered. Bandaged from Head to Foot. Dared Not Wash
Him. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment
4 Weeks and He Was Cured.

"A few days after birth we noticed an inflamed spot on our baby's hip which soon began spreading until baby was completely covered even in his eyes, ears and nostrils. For eight weeks he was bandaged from head to foot. He could not understand it. He distress was terrible. Our regular physician pronounced it chronic eczema. He is a very able physician and treated him with the best in this locality, neverth-less, the disease began spreading until baby was completely covered. He was losing flesh so rapidly that we became alarmed and decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"Not until I commenced using Cuticura Soap and Ointment could we tell what he looked like, as we dared not wash him, and I had been putting one application after another on him. On removing the band from his head the hair came off, and left him entirely bald, but since we have been using Cuticura Soap and Ointment he has no more hair at all. Four weeks after we began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment he was entirely cured. I don't believe any one could have eczema worse than our baby.
"Before we used the Cuticura Remedies we could hardly look at him, he was such a pitiful sight. His mother found that I could treat him, they seemed to relieve him so much.
Cuticura Soap and Ointment stand by themselves and the result, they quickly and surely bring to their own recommendation." (Signed)

Cost of Education in Germany.

The average annual cost for each pupil for public-school education in Germany is $12.50.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages. That is Catarrh. Catarrh is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and restoring nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer the Hundred Dollar Reward for any case that fails to cure. Send for testimonials.

Flavored to Taste.

"It's the insects," complained the amateur gardener. "They destroy all my radishes; and, try as I may, I can't exterminate them." "Don't remedy I know," said the friend, "is to lay salt between the rows. Never been known to fail." "Well," said the friend, when next they met, "and did you try the salt on those insects?" "Yes," replied the other, "and the next morning the little buggers were pulling up the radishes, dipping them in salt, and eating them by the score!"—Jones. 10-11.

CHAPTER XX.

Kananda and the Swami, in the up-town bachelor apartment which they had secured from the Fifth Avenue building, spent about a table on which were spread various diagrams. All, Mrs. Missioner's servant, stood at a respectful distance. He wore a concerned look that intimated he had been subjected to some pretty stiff questioning by his master. The high-caste Oriental paid little attention to him. They leaned over the table, studying their heads almost touching, until the papers that lay upon it, occasionally following the lines with pencils, and pausing to make hurried calculations on the margins of the sheets. At length the Swami turned back and gazed fixedly at the prince.

"It is evident we're on the right track at last," he said. "Chunda and Gazi had not done their work thoroughly."

"They didn't do it at all, when it comes to that," answered the prince. "Instead of finding only a loose end of the thread, they ought to have untangled the whole skein."

"However," said the Swami, "this note shows my original suppositions were accurate. The jewels were taken by the man who trod on the false diamond in the opera box."

"It looks as if it were so," Kananda replied. "The question is, where are they now?"

"The woman has them," returned the scholar.

"Unless," sneered Nandy, "she is beating our enterprising clubman at his own game. How do you know she hasn't sold them?"

"This I know—"

"Oh, I note all about that," laughed the prince. "It is plain you have not given sufficient thought to the ways of these western women. If only you would take your head out of those esoteric clouds once in a while, and come to earth for a look around, you wouldn't be quite so ingenious."

"But she says in this note she will have to sell some of the jewels," the Swami protested. "That certainly intimated they are still in her possession."

"On the surface it does," said Nandy.

"But the woman when she wrote it could not have supposed it was to be read by anyone save Griswold."

"How do you know she didn't intend to deceive him?" asked Kananda.

"It's a good thing you chose the scholar's life in early youth, my friend. As a society man, you'd make an exceedingly interesting, but distressingly hopeless 'innocent abroad.'"

Nandy had learned the philosophy of femininity in one of the wildest sets of Cambridge town; in the most exclusive London clubs; in the Olympian gatherings of Heidelberg students, and in the most flimsy circles of the city capital. Whatever his theory, there was nothing hesitant about it. He held in regard to the sex only the most settled opinions.

"It seems to me," said the Swami, "that your conclusions are pretty far fetched. But I bow to you, prince, in the matter of social law. Perhaps I know a little more about the higher mysteries, but when it comes to cotton-wool, you take the baccalaureate degree."

There may have been a shade of irony in his words. If so, Kananda, for all his subtlety, failed to notice it.

"I think you are clouding the question needlessly when you take it for granted the woman who wrote this note is not true to Curtis Griswold's interests." And the Swami tapped the table meditatively with the scrap of paper the man with the glistering eyes had flicked from the camera board in Burleson's workshop.

"Wouldn't it be a good deal more direct," said the Swami, "to conclude that she received the jewels from Griswold, that she still has them, and that she will not part with any of them until the clubman has refused to comply with her request for money?"

"Yes," Kananda admitted. "We'll work along that line for the present. Now, then, where's the woman?"

He turned to all with a piercing look. The servant saluted.

"Excellency," said he, "we have notified the address heading the second letter. She is there."

"It is well," said the prince curtly. "Go!"

He turned to the Swami and, standing with one foot on his chair, raised his elbow to his knee and lowered his chin to his hand.

"I believe we're close to the end of our quest," he mused. "I have a feeling we must get the Maharajah to-night, if we are to recover it at all. We have played a waiting game for many months, and it is time now to act. Are you prepared?"

"I am prepared."

"You will not stay your hand when it comes to the point?"

The Swami did not answer. He sat with folded arms, his gaze on the documents on the table. It was in an altered voice that at length he spoke:

"Prince," he said, "already the sacred gem should be ruby red with the blood that has been spilled for it. There is something in the air of this strange land that makes it distasteful to me—the thought of further bloodshed. Regain the jewel we must; but I would it could be done without new sacrifices of life."

An expression of demoniacal scorn overspread Kananda's features until he confronted the sage with the face of a gargoyle.

"And the brethren?" he asked angrily. "Can it be you have a thought for these western dogs when your own brothers of the faith are suffering the shame and pain in which we left them? Has your heart turned to water?"

The Swami did not answer. Still with folded arms, he kept his gaze on the papers, his features set in quiet determination.

"Are you afraid?" pursued the prince. "Does your soul shrink, your hand draw back, now that the appointed hour is near? Are you a true believer and master of the faith, or—"

he almost screamed, "An apostate!"

The Swami's copper face turned a darker shade. A flash of fury seared his eyes as he raised them to those of the prince. He lowered them again, however, and said, stolidly:

"I am unable to conquer the feeling that it cannot be for the good of the brothers to wade through blood as did our fathers for possession of what, after all, is simply a stone. I know what it means to the chosen ones—to have that stone taken back to the temple. I feel more keenly than you can feel the yearning they send across the seas for the success of our mission. But, prince, the Maharajah diamond, in its journey across the world, has been purged perhaps of the scarlet stains that were upon it. Can we not take it back in all its present purity? Are we not skilled enough in the ways of the East to recover our own without bearing death to the men of the West?"

Kananda spurred the chair away and, gripping the table with both hands, leaned toward the scholar.

"Listen to me, master!" he said savagely. "It was all these possibilities my father anticipated when he sent me as your companion in this enterprise. He knew I was experienced in the wiles of these Western dogs. He was aware that in the English university and the British capital, as well as in the cities of the European continent, I had mingled with them in their pastimes and in their homes—that I had seen and heard their people philosophy—that I had studied their womanish religions, and that I had experienced all the soul poison by which their so-called civilization turns men to children. Can you guess the orders the Maharajah laid upon me when he bade me come with you?"

The Swami still maintained a dignified silence.

"I will tell you," continued the prince. "My father said: 'The time may come, my son, when your friend, the great teacher, quails from that which is before him. If it comes, then when it comes, strike as swiftly and surely as you would strike to save your throne. And I will strike, my master!' Kananda added grimly resolute. 'If you flinch from any necessity that arises in carrying out this task of ours, I will warn you once—even as I am warning you now—and then, if you still stay your hand or seek to save the least of those who may stand between us and the sacred jewel, by God I'll kill you!'

The scholar's imperturbability was proof against Kananda's violence of word and manner. The only sign he gave was a slight tightening of his fingers as they clasped his arms, and a lightning look straight into the eyes of the young man across the table. It was in a tone of perfect control that he replied:

"Death, when it comes to myself, is the least of my concerns. You may strike when you will, Your Highness. I am a master of the faith, but, none the less, a servant of the throne. My life belongs to your royal father to do with it as he pleases. And since you tell me that you are the long arm of the Maharajah, it is at your disposal, too."

His calmness reminded the Prince of his own Oriental origin. The vehemence he had acquired in western lands slipped from him like a loosened robe. In an instant, under his outward seeming of an English or American man-about-town, he repossessed the composure of his race.

"Sorry," he said with a little forced laugh. "I rather bad, you know, to take things to heart that way, but this really is a serious proposition, and we mustn't fall down on it. As you are so near success, I will tell you it is a question not only of play, but of politics. There is a dash of mild stinckcraft in it. The Maharajah has a pretty well-rooted idea that the permanency of his reign depends on restoring the diamond to the Temple."

"I Had No Thought of Giving Up the Quest."

The sage looked at him interrogatively.

"Funny, I know," continued Nandy. "but, after all, it is the twentieth century, and the P's and O's boats take some pretty restless people to India. Those busy-bodies have straitened up a good deal of discontent in our part of the world, and my father is an observant man."

"I had no thought of giving up the quest," the Swami explained. "All I wished to do was to move more deliberately. I believe we can recover the stone without great violence, and I incline to think it would be better for our religion, for your father, and for the brethren—to say nothing of ourselves—if we could do so. The enlight way sometimes really is the best."

"I know all that," insisted the Prince, "but we have not the time. This hunt is drawing close to a hot finish. You forget that we have the cleverest detective in New York—one of the cleverest in the world—to hunt. If he got the diamond, he would not recognize our claim to it for an instant. He'd turn it over to Mrs. Missioner, and we would not stand the ghost of a chance in any court of law. This is a case where we must help ourselves to our own. Besides, there is Griswold. How do we know he is not getting ready to flee with the jewels tonight? They may be in his possession, or he may have given them to the woman who signs herself Millicent."

The Prince paused, looked his fingers tip to tip, and framed between them at the note as if peering into a crystal gazer's globe.

"I am convinced the woman has the necklace," he went on. "Our men have had time to search Griswold's apartment from end to end, and the other men's, too. If they found the jewels in either place, we would know it by now. The whole question presents itself clearly enough to my mind. The old French proverb holds good, cherchez le femme."

SUNDAY NOT SABBATH.

"Strange how people get tangled on the use of words," said a Jewish woman recently. "You hear many Christians, especially those of Old England families and even those of New England descent, say 'Sabbath' when they mean 'Sunday.' Now, the word 'Sabbath' is the Jewish word for 'seventh.' It has only that meaning, and it is used commonly when no reference to a day of rest is intended. It is and was applied to the day appointed for rest and religious observance among the Jews, because that day is the seventh day of the week. Christians who use it to mean their day of rest do so with what seems a ridiculous lack of congruity for Sunday is the first day of the week in every-one knows and Sabbath cannot be correctly used except as applying to the seventh."

WHISTLE TO DODGE BERGS.

These are the days when icebergs worry the transatlantic steamship skippers. It isn't pleasant to run along through a fog on a murky night and smash into one of those floating mountains of ice. The liner captains have a way of finding ice that at first strikes the landmen as curious. When it is suspected there are bergs in the neighborhood the whistle is kept going. If there is an echo the navigator slows down and keeps a sharp eye out, for echoes don't grow in the open ocean.

KILLED BY FALLING ROCK.

A tragic incident occurred near Berne, Switzerland, a few days ago. During a procession to a mountain chapel a rock rolled down upon a band of pilgrims. A young girl of 18 was killed while walking by the side of her fiancé, and others of the band were badly injured.

THE TRUE TEST.

Tried in Janesville, It Has Stood the Test.

The hardest test is the test of time, and Don's Kidney Pills have stood it well in Janesville. Kidney sufferers can hardly say for stronger proof than the following:

Mrs. Emilie Hall, 542 S. Franklin St., Janesville, Wis., says: "I suffered terribly from pain through the small of my back and limbs and also had trouble from the kidney secretions. Someone finally advised me to try Don's Kidney Pills and I did so, procuring them at the People's Drug Co. The contents of two or three boxes corrected my trouble. I hope that the publication of my statement will induce other kidney sufferers to give Don's Kidney Pills a trial." (Statement given in August, 1908.)

RECOMMENDATION.

Mrs. Hall was interviewed on September 23, 1910, and she said: "You may continue to publish my former statement, regarding Don's Kidney Pills. Since I used them two years ago, I have had no further need of a kidney medicine."

COULDN'T UNDERSTAND IT.

A farmer's wife became insane, and to a friend who tried to console him, the friend exclaimed: "I can't understand what caused her to go crazy. I hope I'll be struck dead if I don't tell you the truth when I tell you that she ain't been out of the kitchen a day in 20 years."

LOSS WITHOUT CONSOLATION.

The consolation in losing a vermiform appendix is that a man can go through life, after the operation, and no one can tell by his appearance that he is something short. But when it comes to losing hair, it is different.
